To the users of this directory

We are publishing a second edition of Libraries for People with Handicaps because we believe you should know what your public library offers you, even though you are unable to go to the library, cannot read ordinary print, or have a physical disability. The information in this directory was collected in a survey of the 249 public libraries in Ohio. If you are not satisfied with the offerings in your community, we urge you to talk to your local librarian and your library's board of trustees.

As a result of users' reactions to the first edition of this directory which was published in 1974, we have made several changes in format. A summary chart at the beginning highlights the services, materials, and accessibility of libraries in each county. Following the location of each library is a page reference to the text of the directory where more information about that library's services is given. In the text, the addresses and telephone numbers of branch libraries are given if the branches have at least one accessible entrance.

Recognizing that a "handicap" may not so much be an attribute of an individual as something imposed by society, we struggle for a better title for this directory. However, we could find no more appropriate term for identifying all the persons we are trying to reach. We also feel there are some advantages in using the same title for both editions. We would appreciate your response on this point, as well as other suggestions to improve the usefulness of the next edition of this directory.

Regional libraries for the blind and physically handicapped

Two libraries in Ohio are part of a national network for the distribution of braille and talking books (books on record or tape) produced by the Library of Congress Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped for people whose handicaps make it impossible for them to read printed materials or hold or turn the pages of a book. These are the regional libraries at the Cleveland and Cincinnati public libraries.

Any public library in Ohio can give more information about the service, supply application forms, and certify readers for the service. Or you can write directly to the regional libraries:

The State Library of Ohio

The role of the State Library of Ohio is to provide planning, coordinating, promotional, and consultant services to libraries, organizations, and public officials in the development of library services to persons with handicaps, and to provide specialized materials and services to blind and handicapped readers throughout Ohio through financial support of the regional libraries and provision of a collection of large print books to supplement the collections in local libraries. How to use this directory

Information in the charts is arranged alphabetically by county and then by the town in which the main library of a system is located. Branch libraries are not included in the charts. Accessibility features refer to main library buildings only. Information in the text is arranged as follows:

Place	Name of Library	Person to Contact for More Information
Services Materials Accessibility

Services offered by libraries include the following:

Bookmobile: When the library has a bookmobile, it stops at locations which are convenient for a group of people. Occasionally it may stop at the home of an individual who le to go to the group stop.

Deposit collections: Groups of books are left by the library in residential centers or other areas where people congregate. The size of the collections varies, depending upon the space allotted, the interest of the people in the center, and the resources of the library.

Individual delivery: This is sometimes called "Homebound Service" or "Service to Shut-Ins." Books and other library materials are delivered to people who cannot go to the library by library staff, volunteers, or both working together. In this directory no effort has been made to distinguish among an active well-publicized service, the library serving only a handful of people, and one which has offered the service but has no takers.

Programs: These include film showings, book talks, discussion groups, etc., where groups of people live or gather. In some cases the groups are brought to the library for programs.

Materials which can be used by persons who have difficulties using conventional printed materials include the following:

Music and spoken word records and cassettes, cassette players, large print books and magazines, page turners, magnifying lenses, prism glasses, ceiling projectors, films, filmstrips, art prints, sculpture, video cassettes, braille, and talking books.

Accessibility indicates the features of the library which permit persons in wheelchairs or on crutches to use it. The following checklist was included in the survey questionnaire:

____ One building entrance at ground level
____ 32″ wide doors that open easily
____ Level thresholds to buildings and rooms
____ Ramps instead of stairs
____ Safe parking for handicapped close to building, with 3′ area for wheelchair transfer
____ Level walks or curb cuts at crossways
____ Access to elevators with raised letters or numerals on buttons
____ Restrooms with at least 1 wide stall and grab-bars for wheelchair users
____ Handrails on all stairways extending 18″ beyond top and bottom step
____ Non-slip floors
____ Lower fountains accessible to wheelchair users
____ Public telephone accessible to wheelchair users
